

Behind my Mask, Your Reflection

A life suspended seven times at the edge of the abyss

There are lives that defy probability.

Existences where death circles, insists, returns, knocks at the door again and again.

Dominique is one of those beings life seems to have chosen to walk through the impossible.

Seven times, he brushed against death.

Seven times, he felt the icy breath of the void.

Seven times, a gesture, a coincidence, a synchronicity, a presence tipped his story back toward survival.

Storms at sea.

Assaults.

Death threats.

Betrayals.

Accidents.

Unexplainable phenomena.

And the cruelest blow of all: the forced disappearance of his son.

Each episode is an explosion.

Each chapter is a frontier between the world of the living and the place from which no one returns.

This book does not simply recount what happened.

It reveals how a man survived when everything seemed lost, and why, against all odds, he is still here to tell the tale.

Where the True Face Begins

Dominique belongs to those whose destiny seems written in shifting ink, where every trial opens a door to a deeper world.

Since childhood, he has searched for the origin of his being.

He observes the invisible mechanisms that shape our choices, impulses, and fractures.

This book is born from that quest: a mirror for those who walk through darkness, for those who feel that one world must collapse so another can emerge.

His journey begins in the solitude of a late-born child, forgotten yet carried by music.

Then everything tilts: boarding school, rebellion, nocturnal freedom, transcendence in the nave of Saint-Eustache.

One night, the organ lifts him into a dimension where sound becomes matter.

That sacred experience marks a before and an after.

Where Destiny Breaks

At seventeen, a court ruling expels him from his home.

Alone in Paris, he survives as he can: nights in the metro, reckless projects, sudden encounters, constant danger.

A film producer pulls him into a fictitious venture, then vanishes, leaving him with debts and threats.

But life sometimes places on our path the people who change everything.

A lawyer sees what no one else had seen: a young man too candid for the traps laid before him.

This meeting opens an unexpected door, a mysterious mathematician with a system capable of defeating roulette.

What begins as a trivial experiment in a living room becomes an international adventure.

In Baden-Baden, Dominique discovers that chance can be bent... and that certain encounters can transform a destiny.

Then come love, fatherhood, business, betrayals, dangers.

Hamburg becomes the stage of a descent into hell: lies, manipulation, pimps, death threats, assaults.

And in the middle of this chaos, one obsession: protecting his son.

With the help of a private detective, Dominique finally manages to extract them.

For a few days, he believes he has won the battle.

Then everything collapses.

One evening, he returns home.

The apartment is empty.

The accounts drained.

The mother gone.

And his son... taken, carried off,
vanished.

No trace.

No call.

No return.

This is not an ordinary disappearance.

It is a forced, brutal, irreversible removal, a tearing that will leave a scar nothing can ever close.

Since that day, his son has never reappeared.

Between Light and Shadow

To keep him from sinking, a woman pulls him toward Africa.

Projects become a lifeline.

But Africa is no refuge: it is a terrain where opportunity walks hand in hand with danger.

A promising collaboration turns into counterfeiting, into a judicial spiral.

Then something inexplicable occurs: footsteps on an inaccessible roof, the limping gait of his deceased grandfather.

A sign, perhaps.

A reminder that some bonds never truly die.

The following years are a whirlwind: travel, export, Malaysia, success, tension, transformation.

And then something shifts.

Objects move.

Visions appear.

Images imprint themselves in his mind
at the speed of light.

A presence manifests.

An inner teaching begins.

Then a warning: a devastating tsunami
they escape thanks to a last-minute decision.

Life seems to guide them, protect them,
push them toward another path.

The Life One Leaves, the Life That Awaits

After eight years in Malaysia, the truth emerges:

manipulation, sabotage, isolation, destruction orchestrated by the woman he loved.

Abandoned on Christmas night, on the edge of the abyss, a simple message from China becomes the thread that pulls him back to life.

That departure marks the boundary between the life he leaves behind and the one that awaits him.

In China, a new chapter opens, one of synchronicities, signs, messages from the Universe.

Jung's writings, once theoretical, become a living key.

The Yi-Jin reveals the invisible cycles of existence.

Intuition becomes language.

Imbalance becomes message.

Joy becomes a doorway.

Dominique discovers that human beings possess unsuspected resources capable of transforming reality.

That the Universe responds, but only when one asks clearly.

That inner power is not a myth, but a state.

This book tells the story of a life beyond the ordinary:

a life of falls, rebirths, dangers, miracles, synchronicities, transformations.

A life where the visible and the invisible meet.

A life that shows that sometimes, one must lose everything to finally find oneself.
